For this Newsletter I have gathered together all the programmes I could find and we will just have to hope that there are no more restrictions applied because of Covid.

Remember many organisers require dancers to reserve tickets in advance and stipulate that dancers should be fully up-to-date with their vaccines and have a negative Lateral Flow test within the previous 24 hours. Masks should be worn when moving about at the venue but are not required when actually dancing. Some dancers do in fact wear a mask when dancing and that is their choice. There are no refreshments at most dances and we are encouraged to bring our own drinks, and sanitiser for use between dances. These safeguards are important. I heard recently that a dancing holiday resulted in numerous dancers testing positive for Covid. And they were fully vaccinated.

Looking at the programmes makes me quite envious. Owing to the Covid restrictions earlier, some dances were cancelled and now they have been rescheduled. This has resulted in a doubling up on some nights unfortunately. But even more concerning is the lack programmes for some dances. Come on organisers – many dancers report feeling anxious and ill prepared to return after Covid. Programmes of dances published in advance let dancers prepare.

MiniCrib

The latest version of MiniCrib, issued this month, is version 32-02. Included are dances from “The West Wynd”; a collection devised by Nan Lawson (Glasgow) and the “Walnut Book” devised by Anne Dejean. (Lyon, France).

Scottish Dance Music online

For those of you who can't get enough of Scottish Music Programmes you can now tune in online to any number of stations broadcasting 24/7. Not only can you listen on your computer but also through your TV if you have one of these smart TV's produced in recent years, or on your smart phone.

Have a listen to Radio GH <http://radiogh.co.uk/> for music and song.

Two of the presenters are well known musicians Ewan Galloway and Derek Hamilton.
